

Academic Clinical Pharmacologist
Department of Medicine, McMaster University

The Department of Medicine, Faculty of Health Sciences at McMaster University, St. Joseph's Healthcare and Hamilton Health Sciences are recruiting an Academic Clinical Pharmacologist to join our expanding division. At present, clinical pharmacologists are a core part of the internal medicine, critical care and emergency medicine teaching and research programs and clinical services at all hospital sites. A novel Clinical Pharmacology and Toxicology consultation service will launch shortly.

As an academic clinical pharmacologist, you will be involved in a number of clinical scholarly activities, including attending on the Clinical Pharmacology & Toxicology consultation service, clinical teaching unit team supervision and consultation, MD-based teams, rapid assessment clinics, and drug policy committees. You will be part of a regional clinical pharmacology program integrated with the regional General Internal Medicine service and may work at more than one academic hospital site. Successful applicants will be appointed to an academic rank commensurate with their experience.

An attractive remuneration package includes fee for service billing, on-call stipends, and membership in the Department of Medicine's Alternate Funding Plan. The Division of Clinical Pharmacology and Toxicology is one of the top academic divisions in the Department of Medicine, based on education and research excellence. You will be encouraged to join our extensive research program. The Department of Medicine supports an award-winning residency program recognized nationally for innovation in education. McMaster University is ranked among the world's top 100 universities.

Applicants should be certified (or eligible for certification) by the Royal College of Physicians and Surgeons of Canada and must be licensed (or eligible for licensure) in the Province of Ontario. Additionally, applicants will have completed specialty training in Clinical Pharmacology and Toxicology or equivalent. Certification in either internal medicine or geriatric medicine would be considered an asset.

Expressions of interest should include:

- A curriculum vitae and cover letter
- A brief statement describing any contributions made or planned in relation to advancing equity, diversity and inclusion or inclusive excellence in teaching, research or service within higher education, community-based or other profession settings (2-page maximum)
- Names and contact information of three professional referees; letters of reference are not required and will not be reviewed at the application stage; letters of recommendation from referees will be requested at later stages of the search process

Please apply online to job opening #40822 via the McMaster Academic Careers website (<http://www.workingatmcmaster.ca/careers/>) directing your application to:

Vaccination Policy Statement

The University is committed to providing and maintaining healthy and safe working and learning environments for all employees, students, volunteers and visitors. The University’s Vaccination Policy-COVID-19 Requirements for Employees and Students (the “Vaccination Policy”), requires all McMaster community members, including employees, accessing a McMaster campus or facility in person to be fully vaccinated or to have received an exemption from the University for a valid human rights ground. While the Vaccination Policy is currently paused, it may resume quickly and on short notice, as informed by public health advice and direction. Should it become necessary in future to resume the Policy, all community members will need to demonstrate compliance at that time. Successful applicants in those positions that work in host hospitals or other healthcare sites that have active vaccination mandates in place will need to comply with these and any other health and safety measures necessary as part of their appointment. The University will continue to follow the guidance of public health organizations to define fully vaccinated status.
